Re: Net Neutrality

To Whom It May Concern:

Net Neutrality and open internet rules are extremely important to me and I am writing today to voice my strong opinion that they need to be protected. Internet service providers (ISPs) shouldn't have the ability to charge consumers tiered prices for access to the internet, let alone have the power to censor information available on the web. Their intentions to do this are no secret. ISPs have stated that they plan to throttle access to some sites and intend on introducing tiered pricing to its customers; that is, if the FCC lifts the current rules. Please don't.

I don't like paying the high prices I do for the rotten service I currently receive through Comcast and Verizon. I am terrified of the possibility that ISPs will have the power to censor information they don't like or agree with, political or otherwise.

Please listen to the voices of the American public and the smaller companies that will be affected by the removal of rules that protect net neutrality. Please don't let this happen.

Sincerely,

Amy Kline
